THE GREATEST GIFT

For the Satterlees, though, the day did not end in tragedy.

Uncle Frank's truck finally appeared. The back window was shattered. The metal was dented and battered. But Frank, Sana, Ethan, and Wyatt were all safe.

Ethan knows that he will likely never forget the terrifying moments when the tornado gripped the truck, when the window was smashed and glass sprayed over him, when he feared he might never see his family again.

But sharing their stories from that day, the Satterlee boys do not dwell on their frightening memories or all that the family lost. They speak of the power of their faith, the strength of their community, and the generosity of the thousands of people from around the country who came to help heal their wounded city.

Looking back on his eleventh birthday, Bennett knows he received the greatest gift imaginable. "My family survived the tornado."

Left: Ethan and Bennett's parents, Shannon and Barrett, watch as their ruined house is demolished.
