Hello!

Some might say I did it backwards because I had my children first and then went to college to get my teaching degree. After volunteering in my son's Kindergarten classroom, I knew that I wanted to become a teacher. My first teaching job was in a sixth grade classroom in upstate NY. At the time, most of us were specialized in two subjects, mine were social studies and language arts. It was then that I fell in love with history and shared my love of it with my students by writing creative and interactive lessons, projects, and units.

Several years ago, I moved to Georgia and accepted a teaching job in second grade. I was excited about working with the younger kiddos. It was an awesome learning experience as I had to step up my game to develop creative lessons and fun projects to keep those busy hands and minds actively engaged. I'm so thankful that over the years, I have seen where students start in Kindergarten to becoming active learners in second grade and progressing to critical thinkers in the upper grades.

A few years ago, my aunt passed away unexpectedly. She was like a mother to me so it was difficult time for our family. I took a year off from teaching to clean out her house and decide what needed to be donated, sold, and passed on to other family members. During this huge undertaking (she was a collector and keeper of everything) I had a lot of time to reflect on all she had taught me over the last 25 years.

Here's the short version:

- *Life is about relationships
- *Find your passion and do what you love!
- *Enjoy life: try new things, dance in the rain, stay young at heart!

It was then that I knew what I wanted to do...My favorite part of teaching was writing and creating curricula that makes learning meaningful and fun. I thrive when I know that students want to come to school and they are excited about learning. This has always been my passion, seeing that spark, that smile, and sense of pride a student feels when he or she accomplishes a difficult task or learns a new skill. So, I have decided to dedicate myself to making creative, interactive lessons and units for teachers to use in their classrooms. I know how demanding and fulfilling teaching can be. I want to help other teachers by giving them creative materials that will save them time and make learning fun! I am looking forward to this amazing journey ahead!

Wishing You All the Best,
Juliette Roman

Family Tree Project Directions

This project is a great way for students to learn about their family heritage. It has several options available depending on age of your students and how much time you have to contribute to it.

Steps:

1. Have students interview their parents or guardians using the family tree questionnaire.
2. Be sure to have students check the spelling of each family member.
3. Cut out the heart tree (color or black and white).
4. Have students pick a large piece of colored paper to use for the background. I used 12x12 scrapbook paper in the examples shown below. Construction paper works well also.
5. Copy the family tree cards. Have students pick each member of their family.
6. Write the names of each family member in the box below his/her picture.
7. Cut, color, and paste each family member on their family tree diagram in the correct spot as shown in the sample family tree diagram.
8. A page of family quotes and a title is included for students to decorate their diagrams.

An additional or second option is to create a Family Tree Booklet:

- Have students pick a cover for their booklets. There are 3 different tree illustrations included in this unit.
- Use the pages of the family member booklet to interview grandparents, parents, and siblings for their full name, date of birth, place of birth, and interesting facts.
- Have students bring in real photographs for each member, if desired.
- There are two photo box sizes: one is 4x6 and the other is for smaller images.
- Mix and match the pages to create a one of a kind family tree booklet.
